

Ivy Climbed and Ivy Fell

Ivy climbed and Ivy fell

She did not feel so very well.

Call an ambulance! someone said

Ivy landed on her head.

Blue light flashing, the medics came

And gave her something for her pain.

But Ivy steadfastly refused to rally

The doctors said no time to dally.

Ivy needs an IV said they

To get her through this trying day.

So they stuck a needle through her skin

And 1000ml of chlorophyll they pumped in.

With a smidgen of nitrogen added for effect

Ivy straightened her crooked neck.

She'll be fine now the doctor said with a smile

But no more climbing for a while.

You'll need a trellis to help you stand.

You'll need the gardener's helping hand.

You need some sun, and you'll need some rain

And you'll soon be climbing high again.
